Pramukh Swami Maharaj
Inaugurates New Garbhagruh
Swaminarayan Akshardham, New Delhi
13 July 2010
On 13 July 2010, the new garbhagruh at Swaminarayan Akshardham, New Delhi, was inaugurated by Pramukh Swami Maharaj with a Vedic mahapuja ceremony. Then, Swamishri bowed and prayed at the feet of Bhagwan Swaminarayan.
FIRST WORD

Life is a combination of the subtle and the gross. The mind is subtle and difficult to perceive, whereas the body and the material world are gross and easy to comprehend. Furthermore, the mind is gross in relation to the soul.

Actions and words which form our gross world can be seen and heard. They are controllable, but thoughts and emotions are difficult to perceive and restrain. The gross elements of life are important, but without the connection of proper subtle elements their use and results are severely limited. Even in thoughts and emotions we have negative ones like anger, jealousy, greed and lust, and positive ones like love, patience, honesty, forgiveness and altruism. An alliance of positive thoughts and feelings with our actions and words produces satisfaction, success and liberation.

The recent triumph of Spain in the World Cup in South Africa was attributed by an English daily in India to four elements: approach, high level of technical ability that was grilled into each player, concentration and spatial awareness that enabled the players to create extraordinary patterns of passes. Spain’s goalkeeper, Iker Casillas, said, “A team is not just one player. A player can win the game for you but, in the end, everything depends on teamwork.”

The right approach to life and Satsang is related to connecting our actions with positive emotions and thoughts. Yogiji Maharaj and Pramukh Swami Maharaj emphasized the need for samp, suhrudaybhav and ekta (feelings of peaceful coexistence, friendship and unity) in life. All their efforts and creations in the growth of Satsang reflect the principle of right approach.

Pramukh Swami Maharaj consecrates new garbagruh of Swaminarayan Akshardham, New Delhi
Swaminarayan Akshardham in New Delhi represents Pramukh Swami Maharaj’s unparalleled devotion to Bhagwan Swaminarayan and fulfils Brahmaswarup Yogiji Maharaj’s long-cherished wish for such a tribute to Bhagwan Swaminarayan in the nation’s capital. Since its opening in November 2005, over 20 million pilgrims and visitors from throughout the whole of India and over 130 countries have been inspired by their experience at Swaminarayan Akshardham: the divine murti of Bhagwan Swaminarayan, exhibitions displaying his motivating messages and the story of Indian culture.

The recently opened new garbhagruh is further evidence of Pramukh Swami Maharaj’s profound devotion to Bhagwan Swaminarayan and his gurus. Swamishri had expressed his wish that the murti of Bhagwan Swaminarayan in the main mandir be honoured in a special beautifully decorated canopied sinhasan. In accordance with Swamishri’s wish, IshwarcharanSwamiledtheproject. Under his guidance, Bhaktinandan Swami and Shrijiswarup Swami prepared a suitable design. Swamishri suggested a number of improvements and passed the design. So, together with the Sanstha’s dedicated artists and craftsmen in Gandhinagar, Bhaktinandan Swami began the building of the canopied sinhasan. Meanwhile, Harshadbhai Chavda, a life-long BAPS volunteer, initiated the sculpting of the stones to be used for the garbhagruh at workshops in Pindvada, Rajasthan. The design featured stone walls in five of the sections under the octagonal main dome, together with intricately carved marble jharukhas (balconies), gavakshas (windows), 16-foot arches with delicately sculpted bells and an imposing barsakh (frame). The task of transporting these sculpted stones and other materials from Rajasthan to New Delhi was capably managed by the chief engineer at Swaminarayan Akshardham, Shri Ashwinbhai Patel.

Once assembled, the interior decoration of the garbhagruh began. Based on Bhaktinandan Swami’s design, Kirtisagar Swami worked day and night to ensure its timely completion. Assisting in this time-consuming process, Shri Surendrabhai Patel of Bangkok served for eight months. Shri Rajababu and his sons, Dineshbhai and Rakeshbhai, also came to help from Hong Kong, and Shri Krunalbhai Bhatt from Bangalore assisted with the light fittings. In just eight months, this uniquely designed garbhagruh structure was erected. Then Bhaktinandan Swami, Shrijiswarup Swami and their team worked round-the-clock for six weeks to add the intricate finishing touches and transformed the appearance of the garbhagruh. The inner walls and canopy of the garbhagruh were embellished with gold leaf and thousands of coloured, transparent stones, resulting in a breathtaking sight – and a fitting tribute to Bhagwan Swaminarayan.

The soothing light of the garbhagruh canopy, murtis of akshar muktas holding malas and adorned in crowns and velvet attire, honour Bhagwan Swaminarayan.

The new garbhagruh is also decorated with thousands of peacocks in their feather-beauty and soothing light emanating from the many rows of gaumukhs. At the top of the canopy, numerous gold-leafed bells attract one’s attention. The astonishing blend of intricate carvings, gold-leafed designs, gavakshas and jharukhas decorated with bells, peacocks, elephants, tilaks and other traditional designs, is breathtaking and beyond words. Even after prolonged and detailed observation, one feels like soaking in more.

Under such a splendid canopy is the serene, divine murti of Bhagwan Swaminarayan, seated on a pink lotus-leafed seat. The three-tier dais is covered with reflective green stone, giving the appearance of lotuses floating amid a vast ocean. The 11-ft. gold-leafed murti of Bhagwan Swaminarayan is the centre-point of the garbhagruh and draws everyone’s focus, blessing all with inner peace and happiness. All who came for darshan experienced the tranquility, spirituality and divinity, as if they were transported to a heavenly realm.

NEW GARBHAGRUH OPENING CEREMONY

With the new garbhagruh complete, the Vedic inauguration ceremony was performed by Pramukh Swami Maharaj on the auspicious occasion of Rath Yatra, on Tuesday 13 July 2010.

From early morning, the atmosphere was abuzz with joy and divinity. Today marked the culmination of over one year of meticulous effort in preparing the new garbhagruh from start to finish. It was a day which the dedicated volunteers of Akshardham, as well as devotees, young and old, throughout the world had been eagerly awaiting.

At 9.15 a.m. Mahant Swami, Tyagvallabh Swami, Kothari (Bhaktipriya) Swami, Ishwarcharan Swami, Viveksagar Swami and other sadhus began the Vedic mahapuja under the new garbhagruh. Devotees from various countries had also arrived for this memorable occasion. Senior devotees also participated in the mahapuja rituals: Shri Purushottambhai D. Patel (Dubai) and his sons, Shri Manubhai and Rohitbhai Patel, Shri Chandrakantbhai Pujara (London), Shri Harishbhai Bhuptani (Kampala) and others.

At 9.30 a.m., Swamishri entered the Akshardham complex. With the jai naad echoing along his route, Swamishri arrived at the mandir podium. There, children of Delhi Bal Mandal, dressed in traditional costumes as devas, were dancing to welcome him. At the mandir entrance, Ishwarcharan Swami greeted Swamishri and presented him the auspicious kalash and shrifal (coconut). With these in his hands, Swamishri entered the mandir for the first time since the new garbhagrah was completed. Jai naads of Bhagwan Swaminarayan and the guru parampara reverberated around the mandir interior. Swamishri’s smiling face reflected his joy at the wonderfully decorated new garbhagruh.

Swamishri took his place directly before the grand murti of Bhagwan Swaminarayan, exactly in line with the centre of the main entrance.

Then, as directed by the learned purohit Shri Mukeshbhai Shastri and Shrutiprakash Swami, Swamishri devoutly performed the rituals for each of the steps of the mahapuja. After one hour, Swamishri stepped onto the dais to perform the re-consecration rituals of the murtis. Swamishri performed the rituals of the murti of Bhagwan Swaminarayan, while senior sadhus performed the rituals of the guru parampara and other murtis.

Then, Swamishri performed pujan of Bhagwan Swaminarayan and the guru parampara. Thereafter, Swamishri walked to the feet of Bhagwan Swaminarayan’s murti and reverently bowed his head. This darshan of Bhagwan Swaminarayan and his ideal Sadhu was indeed a divine sight – one to be treasured in the memory for life.

After Swamishri had taken his seat off the dais, an annakut of 21 large, decorated trays of delicacies was arranged before the murtis and the thal ‘Māre gher āvjo chogalā dhārī...” was sung in unison. This was followed by the arti, mantra pushpanjali and the concluding rituals of the mahapuja ceremony.

Then Swamishri turned to face the devotees. Swamishri was honoured by senior sadhus with garlands on behalf of all devotees of BAPS. Swamishri then placed one big garland around Bhaktinandan Swami, Shrijiswarup Swami and Kirtisagar Swami as blessings for their tireless efforts in completing this outstanding task.

Thereafter, Yogicharan Swami sang and explained the Sanskrit verses specially composed by Bhadresh Swami to commemorate today’s special occasion. Then, Yogicharan Swami sang the bhajan, “Divya sabhā patirāy baithe...” The melodious singing added to the divinely charged atmosphere.

Finally, as everyone proclaimed “Bhagwan Swaminarayan ni jai” Swamishri blessed the gathering, “Jai for all the sadhus and devotees as well, since this task could not be completed singlehandedly. It is the work of many hands. We understand the glory of Bhagwan Swaminarayan and of Akshar-Purushottam and we want to go to Akshhardham. To attain that Akshhardham, we observe the commands of Bhagwan Shriji Maharaj. Since we have devotion for and understand his glory, Maharaj will take us to Akshhardham. And in Shastriji Maharaj and Yogiji Maharaj we have such gurus who have tremendous love for us. Whatever intelligence or wealth we have is due to them. We want to please them. The more they are pleased, the happier we will be.

“Countless people will come here and everyone who has served here will gain that merit (punya).

“The shastras describe Akshhardham: it is divine and luminous, with Shriji Maharaj and all the muktas seated there. Today, we have the darshan of Akshhardham as it has been described. You might think that at present only a few have darshan but in Akshhardham, Maharaj’s darshan is from all sides. Even here, muktas are seated on all four sides and so, in this way, we are enjoying darshan of the assembly of Akshhardham. What has been made here is luminous, decorated with gems and shining. Whoever comes here will experience peace.

“This has been accomplished by the wish of God and Yogiji Maharaj. Yogiji Maharaj said that Akshhardham will be built on the banks of Yamuna. His wish was so powerful that, together with the efforts and service of sadhus and devotees, such good work has been accomplished today. Just looking at it brings peace within. Now we don’t have to wonder whether Maharaj is actually seated in Akshhardham or what it looks like. That darshan we have here. It is the description of Akshhardham. We are highly fortunate to have that darshan here today, with glittering gems and muktas on all sides. Only the highly fortunate are able to understand this work and dedicate themselves to doing it. So, since you have all understood this glory, this work has been done.

“From Akshardham Shriji Maharaj manifest here for the liberation of all jivas and brought his Akshardham and muktas with him. Bhagatji Maharaj and Shastriji Maharaj were great. And Yogiji Maharaj’s visions were grand – may satsang spread throughout the world and may mandirs be built. With his wish we have built this Akshardham and (since then) over 20 million people from India and abroad have visited here – people of different faiths, from the Arab countries, Africa, America and Europe.

“We may think this is impossible, but in God’s work nothing is impossible; everything is possible. If we endeavour, work is accomplished.

“Today we have the darshan of Akshardham here and we have to always believe that we are seated in Akshardham. Whoever comes here, no matter from which country or what background, will have the darshan of Akshardham. People from all over the world come here to see and are blessed. They see the exhibition and boat ride and are pleased.

“Physically, this [Akshardham] appears to us as of this world, but it is just like what is described in the shastras. We are very fortunate to have attained it.

“God has granted us this human body and we have done what we are supposed to with it. What else are we supposed to do with this human body? Work, business, and so on, but Gunatitanand Swami says that we have to realize our atman as brahmarup and worship God. To become aksharrup, everyone engages in discourses, bhajans and seva. We have attained God, offer upasana to him and have attained sadhus like Shastriji Maharaj and Yogiji Maharaj, so our kalyan is assured.

“The main reason satsang has progressed so much is Yogiji Maharaj’s vision. By his wish, the number of sadhus has increased and satsang has spread. This grand Akshardham in Delhi is also due to Yogiji Maharaj’s and Maharaj’s wish. Whatever seva people have rendered, Maharaj will return it infinitely and they will attain peace within.

Even after death, Akshardham will be attained and bliss will be experienced. That our wealth, property, family, and so on have been used for God is appropriate. We still have to do our family, social and national duties, but through this [seva] our ignorance is dispelled, our base instincts are controlled and God is pleased. This is a supreme achievement. No other attachments remain.

“May God grant you all infinite happiness and peace; may satsang continue to grow in your hearts and may others benefit from satsang through you.

“Here, there is the association of God. In the Akshardham assembly everyone is seated for miles and miles in all directions, but in Akshardham all have the darshan of God as if he is just nearby. We are near to God. He counts us as his own and so grants us darshan, happiness and prosperity.

“We talk about ‘Akshardham, Akshardham’, but here we have a glimpse of it.

“May God grant physical, mental and financial happiness. We must live by Yogiji Maharaj’s motto of ‘Samp, Suhradhaybhav, ekta’ – ‘Cooperation, friendship and unity’. Without this, satsang will not grow. Everyone cooperated with others to work, and so God grants happiness to all. May all continue to do so.”

Throughout his blessings, Swamishri referred to the majestic new garbhagruh as a ‘glimpse of Akshardham’ and this divinity was felt by all.

After his blessings, Swamishri offered flower petals at the feet of the murtis of Shri Lakshmi-Narayan, Shri Shankar-Parvati, Shri Sita-Ram and Shri Radha-Krishna. New gold-leafed sinhasans had also been prepared for these murtis. Swamishri then performed a pradakshina of the new garbhagruh. Observing it from the outside, he was pleased on seeing the large paintings of the guru parampara and their life-work displayed within the decorative 8 by 6 ft. marble jharukhas.

As Swamishri departed at 12.30 p.m. everyone appreciated that they had witnessed a unique, divine occasion.
Since its inauguration in November 2005 over 20 million people from over 130 countries have visited Swaminarayan Akshardham. From ordinary citizens to distinguished diplomats many have experienced its tranquility and divinity...

August 2010 • Swaminarayan Bliss 13
Shri Hari’s spiritual travels continued unceasingly. On arriving in Jetalpur he received an invitation from the British officer in charge of Ahmedabad, Mr Heron, to grace the city again. On assenting, Mr Heron and the devotees of Ahmedabad accorded a grand welcome to Shri Hari...

The next day, Shriji Maharaj left Javaraj with his entourage. They crossed the River Sabarmati and hit the road to Jetalpur. On reaching the outskirts of Jetalpur village Shri hari was greeted by hundreds of devotees who were waiting to welcome him. News of Maharaj’s arrival had drawn a large crowd of village folks eager for his darshan.

Shri Hari’s residence was arranged at a devotee Patel’s house. First, he sat beneath a neem tree and gave a brief discourse. After lunch Maharaj took his afternoon nap.

In the evening Shri Hari went to the village pond by an open building where the sadhus resided. The Kathi devotees had been put up at various devotees’ homes in Jetalpur village. Everyone assembled for Maharaj’s darshan by the pond. Shri Hari said, “Serve the old and ailing sadhus with respect and love. One who serves a sadhu is a sadhu.”

The next day news of Muktanand Swami’s arrival from Ahmedabad reached Maharaj. Shri Hari got up and mounted his Manki and proceeded with a few devotees and sadhus to honour Muktanand Swami. On seeing him, Maharaj dismounted and started walking towards him. Muktanand Swami launched himself in prostrations. With him were Gunatitanand Swami, thirty sadhus, Ravaji parshad and five others. Shri Hari embraced Muktanand Swami and all the sadhus. They all returned to Jetalpur and held an assembly.

Shriji Maharaj asked Muktanand Swami to give hours about satsang in Ahmedabad. He also asked about how he was smeared with poison on his forehead. Muktanand Swami gave a report but he refrained from elaborating about the latter. Maharaj looked at his forehead, moved his hand over it and stated, “Those sannyasis were of baneful nature. We have suffered a lot and will do so in future. The confrontations between good and evil forces have been ongoing since ages. The more they oppose and persecute others, the faster their destruction.”

Muktanand Swami informed, “Maharaj, Mr Heron remembers you. He has sent a message inviting you to come to Ahmedabad. There is a possibility of him granting us more land for the mandir.”

Shri Hari listened and added, “Because of pious people there is nourishment and flourishing of dharma in society. Since he has invited us, we must go.” Then Ravaji parshad offered clothes to Shri Hari that were gifted by several businessmen of Ahmedabad.

On 29 October 1819 (Samvat 1876, Kartik sud 11), Maharaj addressed a huge concourse of devotees in Jetalpur, “Today is the birthday of Dharmadev. I am the son of Dharma, therefore moral injunctions are dear to me. Morality sustains our earth; without it there would be destruction. I have taken birth to spread dharma. Dharma coupled with bhakti is Bhagvat Dharma.” In conclusion, the devotees performed puajan of Maharaj. Two days later Shri Hari departed from Jetalpur and arrived in Ahmedabad by noon.

On the day prior to Maharaj’s arrival, Nathu Bhatt and Damodar Sheth had informed Mr Heron. Mr Heron had sent his soldiers to honour Shri Hari. The devotees of Ahmedabad (Shrinagar) and Mr Heron’s men escorted Maharaj and his entourage into the city. They played musical instruments and sang bhajans along the way and into the lanes and market places of the city. The citizens of Shrinagar came out of their shops, homes and onto the streets to have darshan and shower flowers upon him.

Shri Hari’s residence was at the Navavas area in the newly-built residential quarters for sadhus. Before retiring to his quarters Shri Hari sat beneath a neem tree. Mr Heron’s men saluted him and took leave. Then Maharaj had lunch and retired to bed for a nap. In the evening, Motiram Chokidar, a sentry of Mr Heron, came with a message from Mr Heron requesting Maharaj to come to his bungalow. Shri Hari proceeded with a group of sadhus and devotees. On arriving there, Mr Heron honoured Shri Hari by doffing his topee and offering namaskars. Then he held Shri Hari’s hand and led him into his private room and requested him to sit on a decorated seat prepared for him. First, Mr Heron asked about Maharaj’s health. Then Motiram Chokidar told Mr Heron, “There are a few sadhus sitting downstairs and if you say so I’ll bring them upstairs.” Mr Heron nodded with a yes. Shriji Maharaj told Motiram, “Call only Muktanand Swami, Nityanand Swami, Anand Swami, Dada Khachar, Somla Khachar, Allaiya Khachar, Maka Khachar and Hemantsinh Darbar.” Motiram brought the sadhus and devotees to the room.

Mr Heron praised Maharaj’s work, “You have the miraculous powers of transforming immoral and brutish people into pious and moral persons. Through your blessings and the travellings of your sadhus peace has been reinstated in the state. The burden of our duties has been relieved. Now stealing and ransacking have declined drastically.”

Shri Hari replied in Hindi, “Moral order is spread by people who are wedded to morality. One who observes the injunctions of the shastras is moral.”

Mr Heron enquired, “We came to Hindustan only recently, yet we were able to conquer powerful Indian kings and establish our rule. What is the reason for this?”

Shri Hari smiled and explained, “The reason lies in your (British) system of ruling and our royal leaders’ sedition for the sake of trivial self-gains and enmity. The infighting, unethical ways, conspiracies and connivances between the royalties has weakened us. Because of this inner chaos and dissension, unrighteousness and evil became rooted further. So God has found a way to uproot all that.

“Personally you must have pleased a bonafide sadhu in your previous birth and that is why you have been inspired by God to come to India. You (Britishers) have succeeded by default, because of our failings. Your victory has brought peace in India. God has thus so willed.”

Mr Heron was pleased with Shri Hari’s implicit answer. He felt that one who is moral is also fearless and courageous. He does not allow himself to be overshadowed by others. Mr Heron was impressed by Maharaj’s persona. He then garlanded Shri Hari and sprinkled perfume on his white clothes. He honoured the devotees too. Mr Heron gifted an expensive shawl to Shriji Maharaj and gave saffron coloured dhotis to all the sadhus. Then he asked Maharaj, “Have you seen the land allocated to you?”

“Yes. A residential quarter for sadhus has already been built on it. Presently, I am staying there,” Maharaj explained.

Mr Heron was pleased to hear this. He generously offered more land, “There is still open land around it. If you so wish, we will surely give it to you.” Then Mr Heron said, “In a few days time I will be transferred to Surat and Mr Dunlop will take my place. He too knows you well. I will request him (to grant you more land) before I leave.” And so saying, Mr Heron rose from his seat and escorted Shri Hari downstairs.

Shri Hari mounted on his mare (Manki) and departed with the same honours that he was given on his arrival. Mr Heron’s soldiers, musical players and others escorted Shri Hari back to Navavas. When news of Maharaj’s honour spread in the city the disciples of Loolangar turned livid and found it intolerable. But they were helpless and could do nothing to retaliate. They knew that the impression of Bhagwan Swaminarayan on the British officers was profound. So, if they caused any trouble to him the British officers would throw them into jail.

On returning to his residence, Shri Hari left immediately and returned to Jetalpur. He stayed and celebrated the full-moon day and then proceeded to Mehemdavad. Here, Maharaj stayed on the outskirts. The devotees started preparing meals while Shri Hari held an assembly and spoke to the devotees and sadhus, “In whatever spare time one gets listen to spiritual discourses, so that one’s mind does not think otherwise. This Satsang is divine because of the presence of God manifest in human form. So, whosoever has imbibed satsang into their lives will have a pure mind. He will become free of all sins. This is attained by having firm faith in God. When one’s faith remains resolute, that is true satsang. But if one nourishes arrogant thoughts of how much one has renounced, tolerated or done bhajan, then one should flush them out. In matters of renunciation and tolerance many great kings, who had all the comforts at their beck and call, had accomplished a lot to attain God; whereas one has done nothing. Whenever one gets puffed up with pride for what little one has renounced think of such great kings. If one fails to do this the subtle feeling of ego will obstruct one in pleasing God.”

The entire assembly was absorbed in Shri Hari’s discourse. Still, Maharaj wanted to say more, “To liberate you I have come from Akshardham – which is beyond human imagination. The mind cannot conceive it and speech fails to describe it. Thus you should focus yourself on my purpose on earth and not allow any mundane desires to infiltrate your heart. By nourishing worldly desires, you will get material pleasures from birth to birth, but you will forfeit my association. So, if you cherish mundane desires in your heart, you shall never experience the divine bliss of my form even in your dream state. In fact you shall lose this great gain of my association and be relegated to the ocean of misery.” After this Shri Hari remained silent. What he had spoken was penetrating and worthy of serious self-introspection. After hearing him the hearts of many sadhus and devotees became pure. They realized that his divine words had uprooted their thoughts from the material world and fixed them on to God.

From Gujarati text of Bhagwan Swaminarayan
The Bhagavad Gita. A remarkable event. An odyssey which commences with the realities of life and conquers the ultimate pinnacles of ideals. A divine elixir that transforms one from the jiva state to the brahmic state. Spiritual contemplation that blends theology and life. A stream of thought that flows from individual peace to universal peace. A reservoir of energy that turns sorrow into delight.

This and much more can be said about the Bhagavad Gita, which is also known as the Shrimad Bhagavad Gita or simply as the Gita.

Gandhiji gave his opinion regarding the Gita saying, “The mother that gave me birth has departed, but in times of difficulty I have learnt to go to mother Gita. There is no scope for despair for one who becomes a devotee of the Gita; he is continuously blissful. I wish the Gita be taught not just in government schools, but in every educational institution. It should be a matter of shame for a Hindu boy or girl not knowing about the Gita.”

The words of Vinoba Bhave are also worth remembering, “My body has been nourished by my mother’s milk. But above that, my heart and intellect have both been nourished by the milk of the Gita” (Vinoba Bhave – Speeches on the Gita).

Those who come into contact with the Gita continue to have such experiences.

Indeed, like a statue made of salt melts on attempting to fathom the depth of the ocean, so too is experience with respect to the Gita. Many foreigners, either intentionally or by chance, have taken a glimpse at the Gita and have consequently irrevocably surrendered themselves to it. Henry David Thoreau says, “The answer to any of the questions in my life can be found in this small book.” Ralph Waldo Emerson says, “The Gita is the greatest wealth of mankind. When I read sentences like ‘सर्वभूतस्तमात्मानं सर्वभूतानि चात्मनि’ – ‘Saravbhootasthamātmānam sarvabhootāni chātmani’ (Gita: 6/29), my heart rejoices.” Warren Hastings experienced, “To make morality/ethics reach the pinnacles of success, the Gita is unparalleled.”

Truly, the Bhagavad Gita has entranced its readers. It has guided the lost on the way of life, and has redirected people’s gaze, immersing them in introspection. It has made those weak in religion, courageous, and has inspired faithless scholars towards devotion. It has affirmed restraint in one who indulges, and has explained the importance of vairāgya (detachment from worldly pleasures) to one who has become unrestrained under the shield of bhakti. It has helped people to shake off laziness, pouring in them the enthusiasm to endeavour, and it has invigorated the defeated. What has the Bhagavad Gita not done? How has this all been made possible? The answer can be found in a slok in the Gita Mahatmya – ‘Yasmād dharmameyee Geetā sarvagnānaprayojikā, sarvashāstramayee Geetā tasmād Geetā vishishyate.’ Meaning, ‘The Gitā abounds with dharma, is the inspirer of all knowledge and encompasses all the shastras. This is why the Gita has attained a unique status’ (Gita Mahatmya Anusandhan).

Let us take a look at some interesting facts about the Gita.

THE MAHABHARAT

Before we contemplate on the Gita, we must first remember the Mahabharat because the Bhagavad Gita is a part of the Mahabharat.

The Mahabharat is history (itihās). It is the cultural history of great (mahān) India (Bharat). ‘इति’ – ‘Iti’ means ‘in this way’; ‘हा’ – ‘ha’ means ‘indeed’, ‘truly’; and ‘आयाम’ – ‘āśa’ means ‘occurred’. The etymological meaning of the word ‘itihās’ is thus, “In this way (it) has truly occurred.” The ‘Mahabharat’ is a documentary poem of true events.

Maharshi Veda Vyāsji is its composer. Here, in eighteen parvas (chapters) and a hundred thousand sloks, a vast span of the history of India has been immortalized.

The author is wise enough to ensure that nothing worth saying has been left out, and that nothing unnecessary has been said. In the Mahabharat it is stated regarding itself, ‘पर्यं चार्थे च कामे च मोक्षे च भरतर्थं। यदहांत्यात्र तदन्तः च न तत् क्वचिच‘ – ‘Dharme cha kāme cha mokshe cha bharatarshabha, yadihāsti tadanyatra yannēhāsti na tat kvachit’ – ‘With regards to the four endeavours – dharma, artha, kāma and moksha, only what has been said in the Mahabharat can be seen in the world, and whatever has not been said here is not to be seen anywhere’ (Mahabharat 1.56.33). Thus, the Mahabharat is a complete volume, explaining all aspects of life. For this very reason this divine volume, which is an encyclopedia of India’s sanātana cultural history, has attained great respect in world literature. It is held in great regard as the longest poem on earth.

The Gita shines with beauty within this glorious Mahabharat: like a small pārijāt tree shines in a garden; like a star woven into a garland shines; like the moon, the king of the night, shines amongst the stars; like a noble son shines in a noble family; and like the atman shines in the body.

Truly, the soul of the entire Mahabharat is marvellously encompassed in this small shastra.

Let us take a look at the grandeur of the Shrimad Bhagavad Gita, a divine part of the Mahabharat.

THE GRANDEUR OF THE SHRIMAD BHAGAVAD GITA

A royal palace can be experienced in two ways. First of all, by looking at its exterior grandeur, and secondly by entering and experiencing its inner grandeur. The Bhagavad Gita is a royal palace-like shastra. Its outer and inner grandeur are extremely pleasing.

THE EXTERNAL GRANDEUR

The outer grandeur of the Bhagavad Gita means knowing about its composer, appearance, style, etc.

THE COMPOSER

‘व्यासेन ग्रहिता’ – ‘Vyasena Grathitā’ – The Mahabharat has been written by Veda Vyās. The Gita is a part of the Mahabharat, therefore its author is the same. The Bhagavad Gita has been written poetically. Therefore, the question may arise that did Shri Krishna Bhagwan deliver the precepts to Arjun in the exact way they are found poetically in the Gita? Did Arjun also express his curiosity in a poetic manner? The answer is no. In reality, this whole account of whatever happened... during the war, or whatever Arjun asked and whatever precepts Shri Krishna Bhagawan gave was encompassed in a poetic form in the Mahabharat by Maharshi Veda Vyasa. Thus, though it is Krishna who is speaking to Arjun in the Gita, it is Maharashi Veda Vyasa who has given a literary form.

PLACE

‘मध्ये महाभारताम’ – ‘Madhye Mahabharatam’ – ‘It is the middle of the Mahabharat.’ The Gita is found in the Bhishma Parva of the Mahabharat. As far as the description goes in the ongoing story in the Bhishma Parva, Maharshi Veda Vyasa goes to the blind Dhritarashtra and warns him of the many inevitable consequences the war will have. Moreover, so that Dhritarashtra can receive a complete account of the battlefield, he appoints the learned Sanjay, giving him divine eyes so that he can give an eye-witness report. Vyasa then takes leave. Sanjay, by the ability of his divine eyes, could see afar. He starts to report to Dhritarashtra. The description to this point takes up 24 adhyays (sub-chapters) of the Bhishma Parva. At the start of the 25th adhyay, Dhritarashtra asks, ‘धर्मक्षेत्रे कुरुक्षेत्रे समवेता युयुस्वाहा, मामकाहा पांडवाश्चावा किमकुर्वित संज्ञया’ – ‘Dharmakshetre kurukshetre samavetā yuyutsavahā, māmakāhā pāṇḍavāścaiva kimakurvata Sanjaya’ – ‘O Sanjaya! What did my sons and Pandu’s sons do in Kurukshetra (the name of battlefield), which is a righteous land’ (Mahabharat, Bhishma Parva 25.1). This curiosity of Dhritarashtra marks the start of the Gita. This shlok (verse) is the first shloka of the Gita. Therefore, the 25th adhyay of the Bhishma Parva of the Mahabharat is the start of the first adhyay of the Gita. Thus, the Gita is contained between the 25th adhyay and the 42nd adhyay.

FORM: 18 ADHYAYS, 700 SHLOKAS

The Bhagavad Gita is spread across eighteen adhyays. These 18 adhyays comprise of seven hundred shloks. Of these, one shlok is spoken by Dhritarashtra, 47 by Sanjaya, 84 by Arjun and 574 by Shri Krishna.

STYLE: DIALOGUE

The Gita is a dialogue. In fact, the entire Mahabharat is a dialogue. In that dialogue, Vaishampayan Rishi is the main speaker and Janmajay is the main listener. Thus the main dialogue of the Mahabharat is between Vaishampayan and Janmajay.

This dialogue contains another dialogue – the dialogue between Dhritarashtra and Sanjaya, in which, as described above, the blind Dhritarashtra is an enthusiastic listener, eager to hear a report of the battlefield from Sanjaya, the orator. Thus, this dialogue is the second dialogue in the Mahabharat, and this second dialogue encompasses the entire Gita.

Now, this second dialogue contains a third dialogue. The divine dialogue that took place between Arjun and Shri Krishna.

Thus the Mahabharat contains a unique triple dialogue combination. Of these, the third dialogue is the most important.

POETIC

The Bhagavad Gita is a poem. The great poet Vyasa has poetically recorded this divine dialogue between God and devotee in a variety of well-known metres, like anushtup and upjäti.

Mysticism is the soul of poetry. The Gita is extremely mystic. Emotion is the ornament of poetry. The precepts of the Gita is emotional. Casualness is the aroma of poetry. The precepts of the Gita are casual. The Gita is an ideal poem. It is a poem of life, a philosophical poem. A stream of emotions flows in this poem and can be experienced like an incoming tide. The sthitpragna brähmic state is the embodiment of a mountain steadiness.

For this reason many poetry lovers have relished this shastra from a poetical point of view.

Thus, in terms of style the Gita encompasses a beautiful and balanced combination of dialogue and poetry.

BHAGAVAD GITA: A HISTORY

The Mahabharat is history. The Bhagavad Gita is a part of the Mahabharat, therefore it is also history. It is a true event. It is not fiction. The Mahabharat is not a collection of fictional stories like those about birds and animals or made-up incidents to teach some moral. Nor is the Gita a creation of Vyas's imagination. Whatever has been described in the Gita has ‘ha’ – ‘truly’ ‘āsa’ – ‘happened’ ‘iti’ – ‘in this way’. Instead of thinking that such an event could never happen, our intellect should be pure and healthy enough to conclude that ‘even this could happen’.

Therefore, Shri Krishna and Arjun are not imaginary characters. Arjun’s weakness or religious instability is not imaginary. Nor are the precepts of Shri Krishna made up. Everything is true, because the Gita is history.

We have thus seen the external grandeur of the Gita, now let us see its inner grandeur.

THE INNER GRANDEUR

Imagine if someone picked up a jasmine flower, but spent all their time counting its petals instead of enjoying its fragrance? What if someone disregarded the sweet honey of a honeycomb, and spent all their time counting its holes? We must make sure this does not happen with the Gita. It is not sufficient just to look at its author, time, place, language, style, etc. We must experience its inner grandeur. This experience has the ability to transform one’s life.

So what is the inner grandeur of the Bhagavad Gita? By tradition, at the end of each adhyay, a small sentence indicating the end of the adhyay is spoken. For example, ‘इति श्रीमद्रामस्य परमार्थकरुणात्मका उपनिषदाः ब्रह्मविद्यायां योगार्थके श्रीकृष्णार्जुनसंवेदे अजुनिकविद्यायो नाम प्रथमोद्धायः।’ – ‘Iti Shrimadbhagavadgitāsa Upanishatsa Brahmacāryāyam Yogāstāre ShriKrishnārjunasamvāde Arjunavishādayogo nāma prathamodhyāyā.’ By considering these words we find a direction in which to experience the inner grandeur, the main expounded topic, of the Gita.

UPANISHATSU

The word ‘Upanishatsu’ has given the Bhagavad Gita the status of an Upanishad. Why is the Bhagavad Gita an Upanishad? Because the Upanishads explain, protect and nurture the ultimate principles and lead one to a true life. There is a well-known saying regarding this: ‘सर्वोपनिषदो गायो दोषथा गोपालनं। पाथौ वसह सुभीमभाकु दृढ्य गीतामूलं महत।’ – ‘Sarvopanishado gāyo dogdhā Gopālanandanaha, Partho vatsaha sudheerbhoktā dugdham Geetāmṛutam mahat’ – ‘All the Upanishads are like a cow. Gopālndan Shri Krishna is the milker of that cow. Parth (Arjun) is the young calf which on seeing milk flows from the udders of the cow. The nectar-like milk of these Upanishads in the form of a cow is the Bhagavad Gita, which the wise drink’ (Gita Mahatmya).

To speak in the language of ontologists, the Gita has truly ‘elucidated’ the Upanishads. This means to say that it has clarified and supported the secrets of the Upanishads, thus affirming them. The Gita carries out this duty fittingly. The Upanishad itself is mystic. That mystery is brahmavidyā. The Upanishads are the shastra of brahmavidyā. The Bhagavad Gitā clarifies, supports and affirms the secrets of the Upanishads, i.e. brahmavidyā.

Thus, the eternal principles of the Upanishads are perfectly reflected in the Gita.

For this very reason, after saying ‘Upanishatsu’ for the Gita, it is also acclaimed as ‘brahmavidyāyām’.

BRAHMAVIDYĀYĀM

The word ‘brahmavidyāyām’ has so much depth. The Bhagavad Gita is brahmavidyā. To understand the importance of this word we must refer to the Upanishads. The meaning of brahmavidyā has been given in the Upanishads. The words of the mantra are”‘येनक्षरम् पुरुष वेद सत्य तत्त्वत: तत्ततो ब्रह्मविद्याम्’ Yenā’ksharam Purusham veda satyam provācha tām tattvato Brahmacāryāyām’ – ‘That by which both the divine entities Akshar, i.e. Aksharbrahman, and Purusham, i.e., Purushottom Parabrahman, are known, is called brahmavidyā’ (Mundaka Upanishad: 1/2/13). In the Bhagavad Gita, both the divine entities Aksharbrahman and Parabrahman are constantly spoken of. Furthermore, in the eighth adhyay Arjun becomes curious, ‘कि तद् ब्रह्म’ – ‘Kim tad Brahma’ – ‘What is that Brahman?’ (Gita: 8/1), and commencing the answer with the words ‘अष्टर्व ब्रह्म परम्’ – ‘Aksaram Brahma Param’ (Gita: 8/3) Shri Krishna Bhagwan uses a whole adhyay to give a detailed explanation of Aksharbrahman. For this reason, the eighth adhyay is known to all by the name ‘Aksarbrahmayogaha’.

In the same way, the fifteenth adhyay is renowned as ‘Purushottamyogaha’. The reason for this is simply that it contains an explanation of Purushottam Parabrahman as above all kshar (perishable) and Akshar (the Imperishable). Moreover, in sentences like ‘एष ब्राह्मी स्थितिः पर्था’ – ‘Eshã brãhmee sthitihi Partha’ (Gita: 2/72), ‘स ब्रह्मायोगमुक्ताम् सुखमयायमश्नुते’ – ‘Sa brahmayogamuktãtmã sukhamakshayamashnute’ (Gita: 5/21), ‘ब्रह्मभूतहा प्रसान्ताम’ – ‘Brahmabhootaha prasannãtmã’, and others proclaim that brahmavidyã is to make one’s atma similar to Brahman and worship Purushottam.

Therefore, the Gita has been appropriately esteemed with the word ‘Brahmavidyãyãm’. The only difference is that the same wisdom that has been given in the Upanishads, has, in the Gita, been joined beautifully with the manifest form of Paramãtmã. For this very reason, the Bhagavad Gita has been acclaimed with the manifest form of Paramãtmã. We realize this because it has been honoured with the word ‘Yogashastre’.

All this is the Gita’s inner grandeur. But this is only the inner grandeur with reference to the sentence at the end of each adhyay. Besides this, we find that many eternal principles such as the distinction between the body and the atma, the greatness of the knowledge of the atma, the necessity of experiencing that atma to be similar to Brahman, previous births, reincarnation, the concepts of liberation in this life and after death, the art of doing karmas, the secret behind avatars and many others have all become aspects of its inner grandeur. Due to this, India has continually been paid special homage in spiritual matters. Moreover, it is due to this grandeur that the Gita has attained a place in the prasthantrayi. Furthermore, many commentaries have been written on this prasthan. Bhagwan Swaminarayan has also given the Bhagavad Gita a place in his principle eight shastras. He read time and time again and often gave references to it in his discourses, and sometimes even explained the novel secret meanings of some excerpts.

‘YOGASHÄSTRE’

The Bhagavad Gita is an Upanishad. It is brahmavidyã. It is also a shastra of yoga. There are three famous meanings of the word ‘yoga’. Yoga means samadhi, yoga means miraculous powers, yoga means relation.

The yoga shastra describes the state of samadhi in which all the vruttis of one’s chitt should be focused on the manifest form of Parabrahman. This miraculous creation and the countless astounding events that occur in creation are all just by the powers of the manifest form of Paramãtmã whom I have found. Thus this is a yoga shastra that describes the glory of the manifest form of Parabrahman. This is a yoga shastra that tells us that on attaining the manifest form of Parabrahman we want to serve him by actions, word and mind, and we want to worship him.

Thus, the Bhagavad Gita’s speciality is that it expounds the yoga of the manifest form of Paramãtmã. We realize this because it has been honoured with the word ‘Yogashastre’.

CONCLUSION

In this way, this introduction has described some of the grandeur of the Bhagavad Gita in different ways. But how can that be sufficient? If one wants to fully experience the true grandeur of a palace, you cannot just spectate, you have to own it! The Shrimad Bhagavad Gita is like a magnificent palace. Its spiritual value cannot be estimated. Nevertheless, by reading it, singing it, understanding it, contemplating on it and trying to imbibe its principles in one’s life, a spectator can become the owner.

8-30: New Delhi

1, Tuesday

Prior to his morning puja Swamishri performed the pratishtha rituals of pujan, arti and mantra-pushpanjali of the murtis for BAPS hari mandirs in St. Louis (USA) and Chachana.

6, Sunday

Swamishri blessed the Sunday satsang assembly after his morning puja. Swamishri praised the devotees for internalizing the true colour of satsang in their lives. He then remembered some names of devotees of the past and added, “We have the company of Shastriji Maharaj and Yogiji Maharaj, who spread the philosophy of Akshar-Purushottam by undergoing tribulations and disregarding their physical needs. Shastriji Maharaj used to say that in a true mandir the bells toll. If there is no murti of God in the mandir then there will be no joy. When the murti of God is consecrated the mandir becomes alive. The association with God is liberating. The worldly relationships exist till one is alive; then there is nothing.”

7, Monday; Limbdi, New Delhi

At 3.45 p.m. Swamishri departed from Limbdi and arrived at Ahmedabad airport at about 5.00 p.m. His flight landed in New Delhi at 7.15 p.m., where he was welcomed with a garland by Atmaswarup Swami. Swamishri reached the Akshardham Complex at 8.30 p.m. On arriving at the mandir for Thakorji’s darshan Swamishri was welcomed by youths waving giant flags and performing a traditional dance. Thereafter Swamishri retired to his residence.

8-30, New Delhi

Every morning, while going towards the mandir for Thakorji’s darshan, the Akshardham staff members displayed and enacted their duties in their respective departments. Children too performed skits and plays to please Swamishri. Thereafter Swamishri performed his morning puja in the mandir assembly hall. This was followed by his daily sessions of meeting devotees and invited guests.

During the day Swamishri attended to his correspondences and held meetings. He also visited the Akshardham complex a couple of times.
13, Sunday; Celebration of Yogi Jayanti and Pramukh Varni Din

At 6.30 p.m. Swamishri arrived for the Sunday satsang assembly held in the mandir hall. In the beginning Viveksagar Swami gave a discourse in Hindi and thereafter children performed a traditional dance. Then Swamishri was honoured with a shawl by senior sadhus. The 60th Pramukh Varni Din was on 16 June, Wednesday, but a symbolic celebration was held today.

Swamishri blessed the assembly, “As long as one does not have faith in or has not consolidated the knowledge of atma and Paramatma in oneself one can never become joyful. To make us aware of that knowledge we have the Gita, Bhagvat, Upanishads, Mahabharat, the Vachanamrut of Bhagwan Swaminarayan and the discourses of Gunatitanand Swami. By internalizing this knowledge one experiences bliss.”

20, Sunday

In the evening satsang assembly children of BAPS bal mandal presented a ballet on Bhakta Prahlad. Thereafter Viveksagar Swami gave a discourse. Prior to his blessings Swamishri was honoured with garlands.

Swamishri praised the performance of the children in his blessings and added, “In our social life we think and organize about earning more money, but once we will have to give it all up. When we were born we came empty-handed and when we die we will go with nothing in our hands. God has given us a human form for offering devotion to him and acquiring moksha. But man forgets God in his love and attachment for mundane things, addictions and sense pleasures. But we should aim to please God in human life. We are inspired to do so from the life stories of great devotees.”

28, Monday

At 7.00 p.m. Swamishri blessed a special assembly for the staff members of Akshardham. In the assembly sadhus narrated some of the inspiring experiences of visitors to Akshardham. Then some staff members enacted a drama, ‘Shenshahe Alam’, on Alexandar’s encounter with Porus and Dandamis during his entry into India. Thereafter senior sadhus and others honoured Swamishri with garlands. Finally Swamishri blessed all by elaborating on how glorious India’s culture is. Referring to Alexandar’s encounters Swamishri added that he realized that he was nothing before the great culture of India and was left humbled. Swamishri added, “One who realizes the power of God becomes fearless and without pain or misery. Bhagwan Ram, Krishna and Shriji Maharaj himself came to earth. If we understand the glory of his sadhus we will experience inner peace.”

DIGNITARIES
The new BAPS Research Institute at Swaminarayan Akshardham, New Delhi, was inaugurated by Pramukh Swami Maharaj on Sunday, 4 July 2010 in the presence of leading scholars of philosophy from Delhi, Uttar Pradesh, Maharashtra, Gujarat, Madhya Pradesh, Andhra Pradesh and Tamil Nadu. A one-day seminar was held to mark the occasion.

During Swamishri’s morning puja in the mandir assembly hall he lit the auspicious divo to begin the first session of the inauguration seminar.

Then, Viveksagar Swami spoke on Bhagwan Swaminarayan, the guru parampara and the Akshar-Purushottam philosophy. Chief guests of the first session were Padmabhushan Pandit Satyavrat Shastri and Shri Prakash Dubeyji, President of the All India Philosophy Convention. Both addressed the gathering, praising the recently written Brahma Sutra Swaminarayan Bhashyam by Bhadresh Swami.

At 10.00 a.m., the scholars joined Ishwarcharan Swami and Viveksagar Swami outside the BAPS Research Institute for the formal inauguration. Sadhus recited mantras from the four Vedas as pujan of Shri Harikrishna Maharaj was performed and the nadachhadi untied. All then entered the Institute’s conference hall for the second session of the seminar, from 10.30 a.m. to 1.00 p.m., in which the delegates discussed the various types of research work that should be undertaken by research institutes, focusing especially on how to promote moral values.

The third session was held in the Institute’s conference hall from 2.30 to 5.00 p.m., in which the discussion centred on ‘Brahmasutra Bhashya – Contributions of Traditions’.

Prof. S.P. Dubey briefly described the 14 bhashyas (commentaries) on the Brahma sutras from the time of Shankaracharya to the present and hailed Bhadresh Swami’s ‘Shri Swaminarayan Bhashyam’ as the fifteenth.

Scholars of the many sampradayas present also expressed their praise for the excellent and lucid Swaminarayan Bhashya. They all said that such a masterpiece was the result of the grace and blessings of guru Pramukh Swami Maharaj upon Bhadresh Swami.

The final session was held from 5.30 p.m. in the mandir assembly hall in the presence of Pramukh Swami Maharaj during the Sunday sabha.

Following addresses by Ishwarcharan Swami, Prof. Pankaj Jani (Vice-Chancellor, Somnath Sanskrit University), Sannidhan Sudarshan Sharma (Vice-Chancellor, Venkateshwar University, Tirupati), Dr Vijay Bhatkar (renowned supercomputer scientist), Pandit Krishnamurti...
Shastri and others, Swamishri blessed the assembly, “Shastras, mandirs and sadhus are our pillars. Today, scholars of these shastras have accepted our invitation and graced this occasion.

“Until true knowledge is attained progress is not possible. Our shastras reveal that the body is perishable and temporary, and that atma-Paramatma are eternal. Such knowledge is gained from a true Sadhu, who has knowledge of the form of God. That knowledge is of Atma and Paramatma, Brahman and Parabrahman and it leads to moksha. The qualities of a true sadhu are described in the Gita: one who enjoys the brahmic state and has no attachments. Yogiji Maharaj was such a sadhu. He always said, ‘May God do good of all. Worship God.’ The shastras instruct us to go to such sadhus. Bhagwan Swaminarayan also said that the four Vedas, shat-shastras, 18 Purans, Mahabharat and other shastras reveal that moksha is attained only through the company of God or his Sadhu.

“The bhashya by Bradresh Swami is based an Shastriji Maharaj’s wish that texts be written on the Akshar-Purushottam philosophy. By God’s grace he has accomplished the task well. May all be blessed with moksha.”

Thus, the inauguration of the new BAPS Research Institute was concluded.

NATIONAL YUVA CONVENTION 2010

17 to 20 June, Chicago, USA

In addition to Doctor Swami’s pragmatic and motivational lectures, the seminar involved interactive workshops, lectures, lighthearted recreational activities as well as inspirational speeches and presentations by other experienced sadhus.

The youths thoroughly enjoyed the convention and left with the message that developing a spiritual quotient is an individual task, but is furthered by group effort and a nurturing environment.

ADULT GUJARATI CLASSES

BAPS Shri Swaminarayan Mandir, London

January to May 2010

From January to May 2010, at BAPS Shri Swaminarayan Mandir, London, 36 participants completed the inaugural Gujarati course specially designed to address a growing demand from parents unable to read or write Gujarati.

Beginning with the basics of recognizing the Gujarati alphabet and correct pronunciation, through to comprehension and conversing, and eventually moving on to basic writing, the course covered all the fundamental aspects of the language. A variety of interactive teaching methods made the learning process fun and effective.

The course ended with a test to assess the progress of the students, which everyone passed successfully. Most can now read, write simple sentences and converse in Gujarati slowly – with some even hoping to go on to study for the GCSE in Gujarati.
